

Volunteer of the Quarter – Quarter III 2018

Andrea Neira

Andrea Neira began attending the MDC Honors College in 2014, which is where she first heard about The Women's Breast and Heart Initiative. "I had the opportunity to hear Andrea Ivory speak at my school orientation, and she was really inspiring". As she began her studies, she also realized the importance of our work, due to the limited resources in low-income communities. For that reason, she decided to pick WBHI as a Service Learning Project with her school, and continued to volunteer with us after completing the project. Our work inspired her to choose a career path in preventative medicine, and she is currently applying to medical school to accomplish that goal.

Andrea recently became our newest Community Partner, and her favorite thing about volunteering with the WBHI is that we interact with the women in our community, and that we can see the direct impact of the services we provide. Some of her most memorable moments include meeting with women from past Outreach Campaigns that remember her and continue to come back and use our services. "I like that the women trust and rely on us".

We are so excited to have Andrea as part of our team!
